The organ was ably presided over by Henry Hall Duncklee organist of West End Collegiate church, New York City, of given by Miss Gorham, organist of the which Rev. Dr. Cobb is pastor. Mr. Duncklee freely gave his skilled leadership in what proved a most impressive service of worship. The kindness of Mr. | so fortunate as to be present. The judg-Duncklee in surrendering a vacation Sunday that he might interpret such noble selections and so worthily set apart the organ to its appropriate use, was fittingly acknowledged by the pastor near the close of the service. Mr. Duncklee and his family may fairly be claimed as members of the summer colony, who with hardly an exception were present at the service and were outspoken in ap- issued from the Caledonian office were preciation of the instrument and its mas- eagerly sought as souvenirs.

The statement by the pastor, Rev. Geo. H. Cummings, called attention to the increasing importance assigned by all downpour of rain, accompanied by the branches of the one church to the element severest electrical disturbance known of worship in the church service. It has here for many years. Besides the burning been well said as the library is the center of Mr. Natting's buildings much damage of the literary life and the art building of about town were many of them burned the esthetic life of the community, so the church should stand as the symbol of the religious life. And the more beautiful and appropriate the surroundings, the greater will be their power in developing a love for books, for art, for worship. Music has an essential function in worship and some of its noblest expressions have been composed under the inspiration of devout feeling and spiritual vision, and hence they cannot fail to impart lofty aspirations and give deeper meaning

The Danville church has been highly favored in having a pipe organ, given some score of years ago by Dea. Dana and for many years played and cared for by his son, the blind musician, Israel P. Dana. August 3, 1895 that organ was burned with the church building. After an interval of seven years, a beautiful and appropriate instrument takes its place in the new church, to aid in its service of worship.

Mr. Cummings, after referring to the exceptionally cordial relations existing between this people and their former pastor, read a message of congratulation from Rev. Stephen Knowlton, now of West Medway, Mass , and stated certain facts learned from him. It had for a good while been a cherished idea with Mrs. Davis to give the church an organ. The cordial approval of her son, Walter, upon his last visit from South America was very pleasant to her, and making that provision in her will was a red letter day in her experience. The following extract from the will of Mrs. Davis who died December, 14, 1901, was then read:

"I will that enough of said sum ($1,500) to purchase a handsome pipe organ for said church be so used; and Harvey S. Dole and Rev. Stephen Knowlton shall purchase said organ, selecting the same with care and good judgment and upon said organ shall be an appropriate inscription declaring it to be to the memory of my beloved husband,

Mr. and Mrs. Davis had put so much of themselves into their accumulations, that for them to give so largely as they were accustomed to do indicated a really high type of christian principle. Mr. Davis was one of the most benevolent men in the church. Mrs. Davis was in full sympathy with him and was especially interested in all, and particularly, foreign missionary work. There were no two people who delighted more in all the church services or took more pains to attend the mid-week prayer meeting. The church and its pastor are the poorer for their loss. Such in substance is the testimony of one who knew them well and weighs his words. In regard to the selection of the organ the following statements may be of interest: After various offers, with specifications and explanations, by representatives of leading firms had been submitted, the committee, designated under the will and acting upon expert advice, decided to accept the offer of H. Hall & Co., of New Haven, Conn., as giving the best value for the available money and on the whole best suited to the needs of the Danville church.

The rain fell in torrents, the lightning was a continued flash, and the thunder an incessant roar, promenade concert at the Town Hall the wind blowing severely. Soon the the small streams become rivers. The roads were badly washed and soon the bridges began to move down the streams. At the village of Cabot but little damage was done aside from washing the roads

At Lower Cabot the waters gathered for one grand overflow; the bridge near the post office was soon rendered impassable, the steps at the office were torn away and cellars filled with water. W. L. Clark was obliged to move his family out of his house for safety. The bridge leading to Dea. Haines' was rendered impassable, and all the bridges on what is known as the brook road to Woodbury were taken away. Meadows were submerged and those on which the hay was not cut are a complete loss. Early Saturday morning, Road Commissioner Southwick was on hand with a force of teams and men repairing washouts, and the selectmen giving orders for temporary bridges. Lightning struck the barn of Olia Dow, burning 50 tons of hay, two borses, three calves, six hogs and a large lot of farming tools, harnesses, milk separators, etc. By the hard work of neighbors with pails one building was saved, but the loss will reach $3500. Insured in the Union Mutual for $1300.

A large barn of John Finley's was struck but by the most heroic and unaccountable efforts of his son Will, who had just returned home, the fire was extinguished and the barn saved; the buildings of Charles Foster were struck and con-siderably damaged; C. W. Gilman had three cows and a calf killed by lightning. This is the third year in succession that the town has been visited with storms of this kind and at about this time. It is estimated that the damage done to highways and bridges will not be less than $1500. Years before the damages done have reached from $1000 to $1200.

40,000 DRUG STORES.

There are a few more than forty thousand drug stores in the United States. If all these stores were so located that you might just as easily avail yourself of the services of any one of them and if you had a prescription that you were very auxious to have rightly filled, you could do no better than to bring it to us.

Some of these stores may be larger and finer than ours but their drugs can be no better, not can their compounding be more accurate. Our stock of prescription goods is composed of the very best quality of everything that doctors prescribe, and no druggist can do more than be exact in his compounding.
